

Before redemption becomes effective there is an act which man must do. That act is not one of merit, but of condition. God cannot do our repenting for us. It is a work which only man can do. Christ could die for us, but He cannot do our repenting for us.

The day when it is once more understood that God will not be responsible for our sin and unbelief will be a glad one for the church of Christ. The realization that we are personally responsible for our individual sins may be a shock to our hearts, but it will clear the air and remove the uncertainty. Repent and believe is the order. Faith will follow repentance, and salvation will be the outcome.

The great error of those who profess religion but are not born of God is this: they are trying to be Christians without being born of God. Their religion has in it none of the breath of God. It is a cold, lifeless theory. There is none of the living vitality of God in it.
